FIRST DAY OF CHA HANDS-ON EXPO SHOWS INTEREST IN TRADES

If the first day of a two-day Hands-On Expo with CHA residents is any indication, interest in a career in the union construction industry is reaching new heights.

CISCO, the Chicago & Cook County Building Trades and the Chicago Housing Authority are in the midst of a two-day event, with day two scheduled for tomorrow between 10 a.m. and noon.

Day one, held this morning at the Chicago Regional Council of Carpenters satellite Apprenticeship & Training Center in Chicago, attracted about 120 participants, as part of a unique Project Labor Agreement designed to recruit CHA residents into the building trades' apprenticeship programs.

Last year, the three organizations partnered with two events last summer and saw a total of 400 residents come through the doors.

Thursday's 12 trade representatives set up to show residents some of their common everyday tools and tasks and let residents get a feel for the work.

The following photos are just a small sample of how the residents interacted and learned about the various trades.

Ceramic Tile Setter Apprentice Tavon Carter shows a CHA resident how to cut tile.

Laborers' Apprenticeship Instructor Rafael Adlam gives pointers to a resident using the chip drill.

IBEW Local 134 Apprentice Cory Alford works with a resident to wire a doorbell circuit correctly.

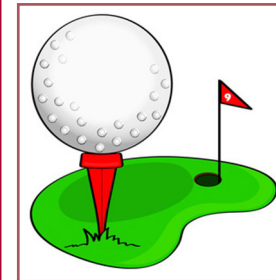

Painters & Drywall Finishers Apprentice Charles Myles helps out a resident with the virtual painting simulator gun.

Heat & Frost Local 17 Apprentice Jamaal Steward helps demonstrate a sealing exercise.
